Bill Carrigan's Red Sox, who had been loafing too much the last ten days for a team that is to take part in a world's championship series, got a whole lot of good practice at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Incidentally the Bostonions earned two victories over the Yankees, a team that has been most troublesome all season. Boston shut out New York

2 to 0 in the first game and scored a 4 to 2 victory in the second clash.

The afternoon's exercises were emimently satisfactory to Bill Carrigan.

New York fought hard enough all the champions look upon the serious side of the game. Donovan showed pitching

Donovan showed the world's series entry as great a variety of pitching as possible in that first game when he sent Mogridge to the firing line. Mogridge is Bill's only southpaw. He is quite as good a portsider as Boston is likely to encounter in Philadelphia and he was forced to yield one run. Yankees and Giants Still Talked About

HE Giants' and Yankees' final games to-day may solve several difficulties. Many wagers were made last spring that the Giants would make a better showing than the Yankees. Now arguments have arisen as to the principles of these wagers. American leaguers maintain Donovan's men have done better, as his team is fifth, while the Giants are last in the National. Giant supporters argue team percentages should count. Strangely enough, in this the teams are tied for the season with 68 wins each against 83 defeats.
